

ABSTRACT

A communication device automatically transfers a software application to a bridge agent in response to an operational control channel between the communication device and the bridge agent. The bridge agent executes the software application to translate a bridge request into a bridge command. The bridge agent transfers the bridge command to the communication device. The communication device receives the bridge command through a physical port dedicated to bridge control. The communication device processes the bridge command to implement a bridge.

10